International Travel

Health Information

The risk of acquiring illness while traveling to a foreign country depends on the area of the world to be visited, the duration of the trip, and the activities performed while traveling.

Recommendations for international travelers apply primarily to the type of immunizations and preventive medications needed for U.S. travelers planning to visit areas of the world where infections such as yellow fever, hepatitis, typhoid fever, and malaria occur. Persons planning travel to areas of the world where these diseases exist should consult with a physician at least 4 weeks before departure.

Travel Health Clinic Locations in Philadelphia

To obtain information on immunizations and preventive medications necessary for international travel, we have listed several travel health clinics in Philadelphia by area of the City. Additional clinics can be found at:

<http://wwwnc.cdc.gov/travel/yellow-fever-vaccination-clinics/state/pennsylvania.htm>

These clinics will be able to provide you with detailed information on the immunizations and medications you will need based on your travel itinerary and activities. Most sites require that you call ahead to schedule an appointment.

The Philadelphia Department of Public Health does not operate a travel health clinic, nor does it provide any travel immunizations.
